Meet Elizabeth...

Elizabeth enthusiastically brings her expertise of communication sciences to the world of business and leadership.

She began her career as a medical speech-language pathologist in 2016, working with adults in multicultural areas including Washington DC, San Francisco, and Hawaii. However, it was her background as a competitive speaker that inspired her to apply her clinical knowledge of speech-language pathology to help working professionals improve vocal mechanics, presentation delivery, and overcome public speaking fears via speech coaching.

A lifelong learner of foreign language, Elizabeth holds a special interest in accent training of Standard American English for non-native speakers and is a Rupp Method certified accent coach.

Elizabeth is also a community dance instructor and avid freediver. She has previously published in The ASHA Leader and appeared on NPR. Throughout her personal and professional journey, Elizabeth has discovered that confidence in speaking can be a transformative force. Her mission is to empower people through better communication.

Companies I've Worked With

"Elizabeth helped me to identify my authentic voice and deliver it with greater poise, and also provided guidance on messaging to better resonate with my audience. Elizabeth is more than a speech coach; she helps you feel empowered to step up as your best self in each conversation."
